

Families Win with Opening of Charity House

Sunshine Coast families are today better off with the opening of the Reed Charity House. The Charity House is comprised of 20 rooms which provide accommodation for family members of patients at Nambour Hospital. The opening of this facility has been eagerly anticipated with patients and families forced to travel long hours in order to receive treatment now having the option to reside at Reed Charity House.

The opening of this $2.7 million house represents the end of a remarkable 2 year long community effort, which has seen local rotary clubs and businesses coming together to provide goods, services and funding in support of the community.

Tony Valli the South Queensland Sales Manager from Adbri Masonry, who donated $35,000 worth of masonry products towards the project, comments:

“Such a fantastic response from the business community is great to see and obviously much appreciated by those who will use the facility to see out tough times”.
